SAILS AND SAILMAKERS

We interrupted our Sails and Sailmakers last week in order to print the very fine historical poem by Mr. Murray R. Tuttle and we have recieved many comments from people who enjoyed his poem. We thank Mr. Tuttle very much. Here is the continuation of Sails and Sailmakers for the people who missed it in last weeks edition and mentioned the fact to us. We are so glad to receive your comment and your contributions.

Such was the master sailmaker. Of what stamp were the apprentices and the journeymen?

In the nineteenth century it was the custom of master sailmakers to take one or more boys for a three years apprenticeship. During that time the apprentice frequently lived in the family of the master, where he received his board and keep, but little or no wages.

James Hamilton came to New Bedford about 1830. At that time he was a rawboned Irish boy. He lived with a Mr. Haffords, from whom he was learning the sailmaker's trade. James was not allowed at the table with the family. When the family left the table Mrs. Haffords carefully removed any remaining piece of pie or cake, and left only the codfish and potatoes for James.

The boy noticed that Mrs. Haffords sometimes made a dozen pies and set them on a beam in an unfinished back room. At night he would stealthily go down the back stairs, reach up to the beam in the darkness, seize the first plate that came to hand, and eat a whole pie. Then he would break up the plate and dispose of it, so as to leave no traces to betray him.

An old time sailmaker, speaking of the 1850's said:

"Fifty years ago when the whalers from this port covered all the seas, it was hard work for a whaler to get a berth at any of these docks. Sailmakers were men of very different position in the old days. Each morning they came to the sail lofts with their high hats, canes, and sometimes gloves. None of them ever had to ask for a job. Instead they were at once recognized by the boss and begged to go to work. Often when there was a big lot of whaling vessels in port there were not enough men to satisfy all the master sailmakers. Then the custom of those who fell short was to wait at the foot of their rival's stairs toward sundown.. As the journeymen came down from their day's work, they were asked to come to work at another loft until nine o'clock, which they often did, as there were no labor unions in those days to interfere with the men."

The journeymen employed in Hart's sail loft were often men of small stature but of great virility and endurance. One of these, Theodore P. Crowell, began his apprenticeship before the Civil War. At the outbreak of hostilities he joined the Union Army. When the war was over he returned to New Bedford and finished his apprenticeship. He continued to be employed in a sail loft until he became blind, well past the age of 80.

You may ask, why did sailmakers always stow themselves away in the most inaccessible recesses of a building? It was necessary for a sailmaker to have a large floor unobstructed by posts or supports, because on this floor he must draw out the plan of each sail and lay down the cloths to be cut. Such floors could not be found except on the top story.

Lacking such a floor, an old-time sailmaker at Nantucket used to cut his large sails in the field. He drove a stake in the ground to mark each corner of the sail, and then starting from the tack, he would walk along a circuitous course and mark his way with a sharp stick. When he arrived at the stake marking the clew, he would look back at his marks and says, "Man's hand can't better that." The sweep in the foot of the mainsail would be from six to nine feet. But it did not matter so much in those days because the foot of the mainsail was made fast to the boom only at the corners.

It was the custom among business men to endorse notes for each other. Simpson Hart endorsed for his friends. There came a collapse of credit and Simpson Hart was called upon to pay the notes bearing his endorsement. This forced him to the wall. He immediately started business again, however, and insisted on paying up not only his own proper obligations but also all of the notes that he had endorsed.

When he died at the age of seventy-two, it was stated that he occupied the leading position in the sailmaking business, and that he enjoyed the entire confidence of all who transacted business with him.

At one time when sailmakers were in great demand, every hour of overtime was counted as two hours. One man refused to go home. He worked until late into the night, caught a few winks of sleep on a pile of sails in the loft, and started in again at five in the morning, being paid for twenty-five hours in one day. Such was the old style "Sit down striker."

James Wittet, a little sailmaker of less than five feet in height, commuted from Marion.

One Monday morning he got up before 3 and walked to work, arriving there before 7. He had tramped 12 miles of dusty road before beginning his week's work.

There was a sailmaker named Church with an enormous white beard and also a sailmaker named George Brooks, who worked most of his life in Maine, but passed the last years of his sailmaking in New Bedford.

These men were typical of the industry in the nineteenth century.

You must fertilize regularly if you want...

. . . a weed free lawn

Regular fertilizing will help you to have that weed free lawn every home owner wants but seldom is able to achieve. Grass is hardy and aggressive when well nourished and if supplied with enough fertilizer it will crowd out all weeds. If not, the weeds will take the nourishment and leave the grass with none.

FERTIL-ADE is applied by our trucks and applicators in the exact proportion necessary for proper nourishment of your lawn, garden, trees and shrubs.
You merely specify the areas to be treated; our applicators will treat those areas with the correct formulation of FERTIL-ADE and at the specified intervals.

It is not necessary for you to be at home when applications are made. Once the contract is established, the periodic fertilization of your lawn and garden is scheduled into our regular routes. FERTIL-ADE treatments are made regularly as required and are not subject to your free time. Your lawn is automatically fertilized.

BE SAFE WHEN SAILING

by Samuel Moffat

Now that summer's here--at least it seems to be here some days--most of us will be out on the water whenever we get a chance. But whether you are in a power cruiser, or a sailboat, or a skiff, there are certain rules to follow if you want to get back safely. There's nothing like the satisfaction of a long summer's day spent fishing or sailing, and there's nothing like an accident to ruin a day, or a whole summer's vacation, in fact.

Before you even get in a boat this summer, be sure you are going out with someone who knows boats, if you don't yourself. Or better still, take some boating and sailing lessons from a competent instructor, then you'll enjoy boating to its fullest. Someone should be in charge too--nothing causes greater confusion than too many skippers. Be sure you have life preservers for everyone who cannot swim. If you're going in a power boat or one with an outboard, be sure to have enough fuel. All small boats, including sailboats, should carry oars or paddles. For a long cruise you must have all sorts of equipment a novice would never think of, but an experienced sailor will make absolutely sure he has everything he needs before he leaves the dock.

When you step in a small boat, try to put your foot as near the center as you can, so you don't tip over or capsize. Don't jump or leap, but transfer your weight slowly and smoothly into the boat, and remember that it will push away from the dock if it is not tied or held there. If you have to move in the boat, hold the gunwales and walk slowly. Avoid sudden, jerky movements of all kinds, expecially horseplay. Don't get in a boat which is overloaded. It's better to wait for another trip than to have to swim back when the boat sinks because there were too many people in it.

Once you're under way, use your common sense and you should have no trouble. Stay away from swimmers and congested areas. Go slowly in a rough sea, to avoid taking water over the sides. And if your boat capsizes, remember to keep calm. Most small boats will hold up several people even when they're filled with water.

Any boat is as much fun as you make it. Remember these rules, and try to do things the way the most experienced person in the boat does. You'll have more fun than the show-off who attracts all the attention, and you'll be all ready to go out tomorrow too.

JANE BALENTINE IS BRIDE

In the Central Baptist Church, Westerly, Rhode Island on Saturday, July 3rd at 2:00 in the afternoon, Miss Jane Balentine, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. David M. Balentine of 74 Beach St, Westerly, became the bride of Mr. Raymond Scott Armbruster, son of Mrs. George A. Armbruster and the late Mr. Armbruster of Mattapoisett. The single ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John W. Elliott, D. D.

Garden flowers for the wedding and reception, which immediately followed in the Church parlors, were arranged by Miss Doris E. Burdick, cousin of the bride. Music was provided by Miss Alara Pashley, organist of the church, assisted by Mrs. Thomas Burdick, violinist and Mr. Thomas Rondonmanski, cellist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white frosted organdy, a garnett brooch of her grandmother, Mrs. Stephen Manchester, caught the fitted bodice which was finished with a deep round neckline, short puffed sleeves, and a full skirt.

Her fingertip length veil of tulle was attached to a coronet embellished with seed pearls, and she carried a cascade of white cornflowers, stephanotis and ivy.

The maid of honor was Miss Doris Isabelle Payne who wore a ballerina length bouffant gown of white eyelet. The underskirt of yellow was again repeated in her wide taffeta sash. A band of china flowers was in her hair and she carried a cluster of blue cornflowers and marguerites.

Mr. Jordan Smith of Mattapoisett was the best man and the ushers were Mr. William W. Simmons of Baltimore, Md., Mr. Wilford Eccles of Mattapoisett and Mr. Wayne C. Williams of New York City.

Following a wedding trip through the New England states, Mr. & Mrs. Armbruster will be at home to their friends at Fairhaven Rd, Mattapoisett.

Mrs. Armbruster is on the teacher's staff at the Center School.
